What I See

What I See.. For many of you who wonder why I don't spend a great deal of time more on prophetic issues, the answer is very simple. I am not here to be 'the prophet'. When God has me say something to my readers, I will say it. If not, I stick with the news and the events of our day that are rapidly changing our world in such a way as that one day soon, it will not be recognizable.

Many of these changes are indeed being managed. Managed by our largest corporations and banks coupled with their respective nations; secret and intelligence power to mold societies into one where there will be clear masters and clear slaves. Slaves being those where the labor and or fruit of their labor can be forcibly extracted and given to the masters. It's the age old adage, "you work and I'll eat it". This I can assure you is the world that a host of leaders and their respective Parliaments and Congress', regulatory and banking institutions are working tirelessly towards. If you think I am 'off' ask yourself where all that bailout money came from in the US and the EU and where it went to. This is not science fiction, it is not conspiracy theory, it is happening right now in our headlines. The only thing you have to do is pick them up (or click on over) and actually READ what is going on in places like Cyprus. They just took a lot of people's money. Granted it is not as bad as the Berlin and Brussels wanted, but this was a major swindle of people's money.

This is the whole 'contagion' argument that I am not altogether certain that some of my readers fully comprehend. Like a biological contagion, a financial one is 'contagious' and spreads from banking institution to institution weakening and even bankrupting the banks who catch it. The problems are real and I strongly suspect that one major US bank who has had some significant troubles in the post 2008 past with some apparently illegal derivatives exposure, may be teetering on insolvency due to major, major credit derivatives exposure/risk that our press and elite are hiding from us all.

One of these TBTF banks are currently under multiple Federal investigations. With all of the talk recently in the news about Too Big To Fail Banks and what are we going to do with them, it would not surprise me one whit if this bank is on its way to the kinds of insolvency we saw in Cyprus. In fact, I think that there is enormous concern about the future solvency of many western banks and try as they might to tell us over and over again that 'US banks have little exposure to events in (name your bankrupt EU nation here)... The truth is sooner or later, our banks will be exposed. Given the fact that there is a bi-partisan group of Senators now looking to re-open the derivatives casino to open-ended betting (with your deposits) , the future does not look bright. What would this do? It should be pretty clear to anyone who has been paying attention to events since 2008. It ensures yet another crisis that will require a massive bailout. A bailout everyone knows the government of the US cannot afford to pay.

Try and understand something here, this is not rocket science. You just have to do what few of you really want to do and that is for a moment, jettison your own morality and ask yourself if you were a greedy, evil person who only wanted money and power and could care less about God and your fellow man, what would you do? Well in a word that is what is happening now, such men are using this crisis to win in a class war in a world of dwindling resources and increasing civil unrest. They plan on accomplishing this with the reinstatement of a new kind of slavery. But here they will not place chains on you and cast onto a plantation, they will simply take all of the money you worked all of your life to earn and steal it so that the banks can go on Gambling in their derivatives casino and tell you that you can only spend 'X' dollars of what you already earned. This is just one form of the thing known as capital controls.. This is what happened in Cyprus for many depositors, and what the UK and US also are looking into to do in the event of a Too big To Fail Bank goes under and just as sure as the sun will rise tomorrow, one - maybe more will go under. This is a matter of when not if and how bad it is going to be. Given this administration's love affair with Wall Street banks and continued refusal to prosecute many for things it doesn't even require a large amount of evidence to convict (like money laundering) I see almost no hope ordinary people are going to be spared this new kind of slavery. It's coming so don't kid yourself or play the ostrich...

I know many of you say... "Dude... that stuff is happening way over there in Europe, it isn't going to happen here or effect you and me." The truth is the plans to seize accounts have already been laid. Both the UK and the US prepared a study last December that laid it all out. OK many of you don't like it when I say these things... you say... oh... another whacked out conspiracy theory..... Well I do not promulgate conspiracy theory, I only tell you what is really going on and I can almost always prove it to you. Do you want proof that these plans are on the drawing board in the US and the UK?

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) and the Bank of England together with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and the Financial Services Authority have been working to develop resolution strategies for the failure of globally active, systemically important, financial institutions (SIFIs or G-SIFIs) with significant operations on both sides of the Atlantic. This work has taken place in connection with the implementation of the Financial Stability Boards (FSB) Key Attributes of Effective Resolution Regimes for Financial Institutions (Key Attributes), as well as in connection with the reforms to the legal arrangements for handling the failure of financial institutions that were instituted in the United States (U.S.) and the United Kingdom (U.K.) in response to the recent financial crisis.

The goal is to produce resolution strategies that could be implemented for the failure of one or more of the largest financial institutions with extensive activities in our respective jurisdictions. These resolution strategies should maintain systemically important operations and contain threats to financial stability. They should also assign losses to shareholders and unsecured creditors in the group, thereby avoiding the need for a bailout by taxpayers. These strategies should be sufficiently robust to manage the challenges of cross-border implementation and to the operational challenges of execution. - Resolving Globally Active, Systemically Important, Financial Institutions A joint paper by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Bank of England 10 December 2012

What does this mean to you? To the uninitiated this means that shareholders in the bank, bondholders and the rich and powerful are going to have to suffer losses. That is correct, as well they should, knowing the risk of investing in these institutions. But here is the rub. The rub comes in the underlined words 'unsecured creditors'. If indeed the US decides to name all depositors in a failed TBTF bank as unsecured creditors then this would be a 'legal' way around FDIC depositor insurance, which probably could not sustain a major bank going under and repaying depositors.

Generally speaking Depositors enjoy a special status when it comes to the resolution of a failed bank. What Cyprus did was break that line and make depositors pony up to keep the failed institution from going under. It was a desperate move that shows you the desperation of the leaders in the EU and give anyone a real look at the panic that is going on behind the scenes at the whole EU financial system. Cyprus, I hate to tell you was a dry run for what the Financial oligarchy may be planning right here in the US.

Under the strategies currently being developed by the U.S. and the U.K., the resolution authority could intervene at the top of the group. Culpable senior management of the parent and operating businesses would be removed, and losses would be apportioned to shareholders and unsecured creditors. In all likelihood, shareholders would lose all value and unsecured creditors should thus expect that their claims would be written down to reflect any losses that shareholders did not cover. Under both the U.S. and U.K. approaches, legal safeguards ensure that creditors recover no less than they would under insolvency.

An efficient path for returning the sound operations of the G-SIFI to the private sector would be provided by exchanging or converting a sufficient amount of the unsecured debt from the original creditors of the failed company into equity. In the U.S., the new equity would become capital in one or more newly formed operating entities. In the U.K., the same approach could be used, or the equity could be used to recapitalize the failing financial company itself thus, the highest layer of surviving bailed-in creditors would become the owners of the resolved firm. In either country, the new equity holders would take on the corresponding risk of being shareholders in a financial institution. Throughout, subsidiaries (domestic and foreign) carrying out critical activities would be kept open and operating, thereby limiting contagion effects. Such a resolution strategy would ensure market discipline and maintain financial stability without cost to taxpayers. - Resolving Globally Active, Systemically Important, Financial Institutions A joint paper by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Bank of England 10 December 2012

The blueprint for what was proposed for Cyprus is right here in this document. Only clearly the EU and US and UK and others are all on the page.

Having said all of this, I want to reiterate here that I do not think that they are going to begin seizing accounts here in America. They have a printing press that is far easier to use, politically speaking. So I do not think this is going to happen at least not right away and not in the manner it happened in Cyprus. For now, despite those who say that depositors of a bank are unsecured creditors, the fact is that by law the FDIC is there to protect depositors, not shareholders. It would take a pretty serious redefinition here to allow them to seize accounts and confiscate money in this fashion. Know that since the crisis of 2008 hundreds of institutions have failed in the US and depositors did eventually (though sometimes after many months) get their money back.

Yet, having said that, some of the folks in government are just dumb enough to try it, so don't rule it out and some elitists who see an opportunity to consolidate economic power over the population by having the state seize the assets that eventually go back to the banks (not depositors) in a reformed banking system in the event of some major economic crisis.. A too big to fail bank going under though will unleash a serious crisis as the FDIC would not have enough money to cover all deposits. This would mean that there would either be a 'shotgun wedding' between major financial institutions or the printing presses would have to be turned on twice as fast as they are running now... and they are already running nearly 100% today... I mean that in a literal (paper and ink), not figurative sense.

Our leaders don't feel you have a right to know that they are printing you into poverty with notes guaranteed by the 'full faith and credit' of the plebeian classes of America. They bail out the banksters and you get the bill. Don't kind yourself, you personally are on the hook for all of these new debts the President does not have the courage to tell you about.

The Western Economic system, despite all of the fine words, lies and prevarications of her financial press is still right on course, heading right into the halls of financial catastrophe, full speed ahead with 'captain crackpot' at the helm. He only has one order he ever gives... "Printers... full steam ahead!!!"

Let me close by saying this because I think it pertinent. When a person really wants to do predictive analysis, the most important tool one can use is the study of what I will call unstoppable trends. What is trending; populations, earth changes, debt crisis, high technology, rise of China... to name a few. If a person can get a good handle on these kinds of trends, step back and (this is the most difficult, most folks can't do this) step outside of themselves and see things from the other guys perspective, one can much better understand where the world is heading, without the aid of prophecy. Second, one must never let what they want to happen or allow some pet theory to cloud ones judgment. Do not get attached to a theory or set of intellectual paradigms. Let the facts coupled with the trends speak for themselves.

As a Christian, I am a long student of Biblical prophecy these days it is as much a matter of faith as it is my ability to read the headlines with a Bible open along side of it. It does not take any brains to see things unfolding just as Christ said they would. But most people will never see because they do not want to see. They have made up their minds that they are never going to believe the Bible.. no matter what; because it might end their adultery, thefts, murders, fornications, lies, hate, sodomy, fraud... So the moral imperatives of the scriptures keep folks from reading and believing its message. What happens when you cease believing the truth? God sends you a strong delusion so that you believe a lie. With God, its either/or; in or out, you don't want truth? Then he will give you lies, lies so strong you will never be able to mentally/spiritually extricate yourself. That is what is meant by a strong delusion. I can only exhort you secular readers who come by here, not to reject God's truth too many times. One day, God will simply give you over and send you that strong delusion.

*And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

More Of What I See...

There is so much going on these days that rather than post news stories, I thought I would to a 'stream of consciousness' update for my readers but before I begin I want to say this. I want to thank all of you for being patient with me with the occasional spelling and grammatical errors. I know with some of you (ladies especially) it drives you nuts! Well try and remember, I am only ONE person. It is just me. I have no staff no editor, no treasurer no one. I am not complaining, it is just that I have a limited number of hours in a day and I write, edit one time and up it goes. If I re-edited it time and time again (it is nearly impossible to edit your own work properly) I would not be writing a news blog but a history blog, by the time I got it grammatically perfect, what I wrote would be ready for the history books, not the news page; "Oh, I see brother Mark finally got around to posting a commentary on Bush's first inaugural address. He sure has great grammar, spelling and writing skills., but those fonts... it looks like he wrote that in Windows 98..." So please be patient. If I ever get to the point I can hire an editor and researcher (to go through hundreds of foreign language newspapers), I will do so. For now, I am like a one-armed chef cooking a meal for 500.... doing the best I can do. Keep this in mind as well. I am a writer, a Christian writer... just a writer and watchman. I am not here to be the great prophet. I will let other get those accolades. I just want to serve the Lord with my meager abilities!

So North Korea is at it again. Today they shut down the last link she has with the South at the Kaesong industrial complex, barring South Korean workers from the facility. This is just yet another escalation/provocation by the North. What they are doing and why will probably not ever be fully understood, except perhaps by one of the words leading clinical psychologists who deal with violent mental aberrations. What needs to be understood is that the South is not a doormat and one day, the North will go too far, a miscalculation will ensue and a major conflict could develop.

Meanwhile John Kerry says he will 'not accept' what has already happened, that being a Nuclear North Korea. Another impotent statement that no longer reflects the political and military realities. Such a detachment from reality just seems to be more and more par for the course in the American establishment. Perhaps they figure they can lie and fool Americans and get away with it that they can do the same with the rest of the world. What has the US done about North Korea these past 20 years? Nothing. What is she going to do about it now? Nothing. What can she do? Very little. US diplomatic statements need to have real meaning and when someone says "will not accept" that should mean what it says. America here, frankly does not mean what she says and is hoping that a strong blast of diplomatic hot air will cause the North to give up its program. Truth be told, this is a mess of America's own making going back to the Bush era. While the Bush administration was obsessing about Iran's nukes, North Korea was well on its way to building them. No one really cared and certainly no one did anything except make a bunch of cryptic statements. Now they have nukes and a credible way to deliver them, though they may still be stymied by some technical difficulties. They probably actually can lob a nuke to Hawaii or Portland.

Listen, the situation in North Korea is a major foreign policy failure. It is also a major Intelligence failure. Not because we did not have the means, but I think because we turned our attention to self created problems in Afghanistan, Iraq and Iran and did not focus on more immediate concerns, like North Korea. Once again, it is that critical lack of strategic foresight. There are only two things that get Americans moving and that is the never ending search by principle campaign donors for major war contracts, and a major 'unforeseen' immediate crisis that cannot be ignored. I use the word unforeseen because usually, they have been foreseen and the one who foresaw them were relegated to trash detail at their respective agencies once they passed on what they saw up the chain. Here is the response they typically got was, "Everyone is talking about Iran now, don't bother me with this North Korean garbage... no one cares about North Korea, the administration wants to hear about Iran..." If you want to know why we are in the pickle we are in now, that's why.

Our Asian allies have to be concerned. Today there are a lot of things happening in Asia that have not hit the MSM headlines. Truth be told, the omissions are so great that it is hard if not impossible to say that the omissions are innocent. The best kept secret these days is where no one would have ever expected it. In a land that no one ever mentions in blogs or newsletters, never mentioned on the headlines and finding stories about this large and sparsely populated nation is rather difficult. What is happening in this nation is not at all unlike what happened in California back in the late 1800's. What was that? A gold rush. It's not just gold, its all kinds of precious and rare metals that are being mined and extracted and negotiated for the rights of extraction right now. Back on the 70's The Russians did a major geologic survey of Mongolia. The survey found probably the richest deposits of mineral wealth on planet earth. The Russians found it, and either buried or lost the report. Later the Mongolians hired their own geologist and discovered what the Russians had, that Mongolia is sitting on top of the worlds richest mineral deposits, probably amounting to somewhere between one and two trillion dollars worth. So today, mining firms the world over are saddling their 'horses' and getting out their 'picks, shovels' and gold pans and heading out to what was once called the middle of nowhere, that being Mongolia. If you think this is some new 'conspiracy theory' take a look at where some of the worlds mining investors are putting their money. Some estimates say that this one mine will double Mongolia's GDP, which is already seeing monumental growth of 12.7 percent in 2012. This is no little thing, in fact this has the real potential to be a major economic game changer over the next several years. Mongolia is sitting on so much mineral wealth that she could become one of the worlds richest nations, if she plays her cards correctly. Gold, Copper, Uranium are all there in abundance. Suffice it to say that Mongolia will become a very rich nation in a very short period of time if she can create and maintain an investment climate that is both friendly to investors and protects the national treasury from 'giving away' all of her wealth to foreigners and leaving Mongolia with an environmental catastrophe to clean up when the foreigners have gotten their billions. Corruption is also an issue to watch with a nation so immature in dealing with international corporations, high finance and the folks who deal in those circles. The running joke is that all of the people who were committing fraud during the Credit derivatives scandal in the US are now in Mongolia, setting up new systems of fraud. This is one to watch, believe me, no one can sit on this much wealth and not have their nation radically transformed. This is already happening as those Mongolians who once had a centuries old nomadic lifestyle are giving it up and heading to the cities, where the money is.

Meanwhile the US is preparing itself for whatever North Korea can throw at us. No one knows what she will do and her massive and extremely damaging cyberattack on South Korea has given US authorities serious pause. How effective will they be against us? Probably not nearly, as the North had 'sleepers' inside many of the South Korean banks that aided the Cyberattack. Their presence in this nation is almost certainly far less significant and not in the most sensitive area's of the major US banks. How will this administration respond? My guess with its usual effeminate effectiveness that will embolden others to take on the increasingly hollow 'paper tiger' empire. Kerry can issue verbal assurances all he wants to about us protecting the South, but what are we going to do it with? A stomping foot and harsh language? It takes months to get troops ready for such a deployment and lest we forget, sequestration has taken a big hit out of the DOD budget. What does this mean? It means all of that heavy equipment that is now back in the US from Iraq and Afghanistan are sitting in the yard, not being refurbished. In other words, that equipment is not battle ready. It will take months and lots and lots of money to get it ready. Those are two things the US will not have if the North strikes the South - time, money and this equipment.

Listen, I am not trying to be condescending with the new Secretary, but diplomatic hubris is not in order right now. It's akin to calling out a gunfighter in the old west, when your own gun holster is empty and your opponent is in a real nasty mood and not altogether playing with a full deck.

Finally, let us take a moment and talk about the media 'crucifixion' of David Stockman. He and Peter Orzag came together, both former Budget Chiefs in different administrations from both political parties. They had the courage to tell the nation what it does not want to hear. Listen both of these men understand the numbers and the extreme fiscal trouble this nation is in; not the political spin associated with them but the real numbers the nation is facing. What they did was commit political suicide. How do you do that? You tell the truth in Washington. They told the truth and every propaganda organ in the Media shouted them down as though they had committed a gang rape at a preschool.

Some of the headlines coming out of America's propaganda organs are below, many of Americans Media organizations are in one way or another, nothing more than pigs with their snout in the government trough, either through interlocking directories with some government contractor or via their advertisers.

Hence Stockman is being crucified by the 'pig patrol'; "how dare he say we get too much slop!!"

David Stockman and the cult of gloom.

The incomplete education of David Stockman

Well you can Google up in the news section 'David Stockman' and probably get a picture of him hanging upside down on a cross if you look long enough.

The reality is that someone has to say something because no one in our establishment wants to deal in realities, we are spending anywhere to 20 to 100 billion dollars A MONTH just in interest payments on our debts that will only rise with our ever increasing debt. But tell the nation that things have to change, real things, real fundamental change and they already have their equivalent of Pontius Pilate ready to send you off to the mob to be killed.... slowly. How dare you talk to us of truth! What is truth? Asked the Pilate of old. Nothing much has really changed has it? Tell the truth and they want you head on a platter. There is so much happening in the economic sphere that our media is not telling you that if you knew, many of you would probably take your money out of the banking system. It is sooo screwed up and our government just cannot stop spending money and printing it. They have no other plan and so they crucify anyone who counters the prevailing economic plan and theories. That plan is to print, spend and fake the statistics.

To me this is just a sign of a collective mental disease that has struck the nation; it's called 'lie me to sleep syndrome' (LMTSS). Do you want to get elected, keep your job at a mainstream publication or get promoted in the government? You have to catch and be a willing participant in the spreading of this vile disease. LMTSS infection rate in this administration is almost at 100% and it is fully dedicated to a 100% infection rate by the time it leaves office for the entire nation to help bolster its legacy. Infection vectors include the mainstream media on Cable and Newsprint, much of the internet with the exception of some really excellent and dedicated blogs.

Is there a cure for LMTSS? Individually, yes. But collectively no, the infection vectors are too prevalent and those carrying a cure are often killed off by those carrying it and are dedicated to spreading the disease. LMTSS is going to take the nation right down into the economic pits, if our enemies don't finish this nation off first and that is also a very high probability event, especially with Obama at the helm. Our President is really selling us down the river. I say this in all seriousness that despite his vocal and highly publicized moves against China, his actions in secret appear to be more in keeping with someone who wishes to aid, not counter them. His cash register politics is going to destroy this nation. This is the worst President this nation has seen in a very, very long time. Image is form are all good and keep the ignorant masses in their constate state of pleasure and self satisfaction, but quick look behind the scenes.... This is a scary, scary man indeed.

I am not just picking on him because the whole system is pretty rotten and the high level Senators and Congressman who have been up there since the first Bush administration are far more part of the the fundamental problem with America, that Obama. Look, one Senior administration official had a one night stay in Paris that cost the nation nearly 600 thousand dollars... for one night! This was flagged by the GAO and where did the money go? Hookers and Booze and those $3000 a night suites. Remember the Secret service scandal in Colombia? Folks, this was just as bad if not worse. But this is the Obama administration to the core, it is wasteful, perverted and hedonistic the epitome of the decadent western empire, that is well on its way to being toppled by the incompetence of its leadership; strumming a harp while the nations economic foundations crumble beneath it.

What I Don't See...

Brothers, today's update is going to be much ~~briefe~~ different update than the others this week and what I will discuss is what I do not see. Many Internet writers, blogger and 'prophets' (so called) write in such a way as to instill a kind of 'shock and awe' on their readers in order to gain readership. They often have some new theory or 'word' that is designed to use the emotion of fear to obtain readership.

What I want to say here is that I do not see an immediate collapse of the American empire on the horizon. I don't see an immediate collapse of her banking system on the Horizon, I do not see an imminent declaration of Martial Law coming. In short, while such things are talked about constantly and ad-nauseum on many Patriot and even Christian sites, the fact is, I do not see things things happening in the immediate future. I do not see the kind of 'shock' events that many see coming. That is not to say that some out of the blue event could not cause them to happen, like a Cyber Pearl Harbor, or some kind of nuclear event or even armed insurrection inside the US. Then yes, a shock response by our government to these things are not only possible, but likely. These are what are known as low probability, high impact events. These things are clearly within the realm of possibility and will change the nation for a long, long time if they were to happen. Do I see this on the immediate horizon? No. The leaders of this nation know that value of slowly introducing the things that are to be rather than giving people a shock. That is why for a long time I have talked about the trends that have been in place with regards to the decline in American living standards. The slow dismantlement of the US empire, the slow breakup or Germanification of the EU (the verdict is still out on this one), the continuing rise of China (with some significant hurdles to overcome), the continuing globalization of the world economy. I do not see any major shocks, lest they be from God but a continuing of the trends that are already well in place.

Leaders around the earth right now have their hands full, they do not need another major crisis; China, the US and the EU in particular. But you can say the same for large parts of the Middle East and even Putin's Russia, who is dealing with growing internal discontent and rising Islamism on its periphery. Shocks and major new troubles are not high on anyones list of things to start today, with the possible exception of North Korea. Not even Iran can really afford a serious escalation of tensions. Yet having said all of that I do think that the trends in place that are preventing (or rather delaying... think money printing) a major crisis has put us all firmly, especially in the US, on track for the real crisis that is going to end the US empire and send much of the nation into grinding poverty that being the inflationary collapse of the US dollar. If we continue trying to avoid a crisis right now with money printing, we ensure a crisis later when dollars are no longer accepted in large parts of the world. This is not on the immediate Horizon, because the whole Global system is so out of whack that today, despite her gargantuan deficits, the US dollar is still viewed by many as a good store of value. What this has done has led this administration (in secret) to become even more reckless with the dollar as a currency as well as the 'full faith and credit' of her government, there is a major difference here, but I do not feel led to reveal it now.

So I don't see 'black helicopters' and 'foreign troops' heading for America to take it over. There is no need to. The so called "new world order" is already here. It has been for years, people only over the past 15-20 years have been slowly waking up to a system that has long been in place.

Global Governance? Folks, do an Internet search on the term, you will find it used by US governmental agencies, the UN, the EU, major think tanks, global institutions and banks the world over. They don't talk about it like it something that is coming, but as a present reality whose efforts need to be broadened and strengthened. People get upset when you use these terms because they don't understand the world we live in. They understand pro-football, basketball and the latest idiocy on TV, but not what is happening around them. Christians are just as bad as everyone else. They seem intent upon not paying attention to the times.

I have long suspected that if the devil wanted to deceive people, the only thing he would have to do is to move slowly with his demonic changes. Don't rock the boat, don't 'scare the kids', just slowly move them in the direction that he wants to take them and before you know it, they are falling down in worship before his feet, believing him to be god. Sure there will be shocks along the way but the way to manage shocks is to limit choice during the crisis period, ensuring that his agenda gets implemented. Have you noticed how many of our choices now are limited? You can get on a plane, but have to have a naked body scan first. You can buy a notebook or a tablet, but big brother knows who owns it and can track you every time you use it. Ever notice all of the new legalese these websites and new technology are throwing at you? They don't tell you BEFORE you make a purchase all the legal agreements you need to use it, it's after you make the purchases then dozens of legal agreements pages long are thrown up in your face. They are essentially forcing you to make a choice by a careful deception. They don't tell you anything until they get you in the room. Once you get into the room two guys with digital billy clubs (named Microsoft and Google) knock you senseless and rape your privacy. Where is the government in all of this? Defending the rapist. Why? Because when the guys with billy clubs get done, Uncle Same says, "I'm next".

One of the greatest tools for informational freedom and open debate and activism has become a corporate/government tool for surveillance and repression. Yes, repression. Don't believe me? Ask those folks at OWS about how they were picked up and spied upon by America's first African American president, whose rise to power could only have happened with the very kinds of activism that took place in the 60's that he has now denied to young Americans. And people wonder why I won't jump on the Obama bandwagon. This is why I don't see any grassroots movement ever amounting to anything in America. Obama will kill it, he will issue a classified directive to the DHS/FBI and local law enforcement that anyone who protests are 'low level terrorists' and arrest them, seize their phones, tablets and notebooks, in order to see who they are talking to and pick them up as well. The guy with the swastika in his soul isn't a German, he's half black. The President will classify these kinds of orders so that it is illegal to let the people know that he ordered it! This is typical Obama, why do you think he has been so hard on whistleblowers? He's hiding some dirt behind his misuse (probably criminal misuse) of the classification system. You want to talk about GMO's and his recent signing of the law that protects GMO makers? There is a major, MAJOR story behind this, but it's illegal to make it known. The fact is, that what the President did could easily be defined as a deep betrayal of the American people on someone else's behalf. In other words, he is using the National Security system, not to protect America, but to betray it! That is the 'order' we already have in America. It isn't coming, it's here. Thank Black America, Gay America and the idiot wing of the Democratic party who never saw or wanted to see anything but their skin color and throbbing genitals when they went into the polls.

So forget about any change coming from the people. They have their bread and circuses and millions now will be able to satisfy their lusts on members of the same sex and get government benefits and money (we don't have) for doing so. All of this keeps the masses occupied. Don't expect change to come from the Church, it is pretty disorganized (and much of it disgusting) and most of it has no spiritual power, except from the prince of this world as they no longer have any intention of doing the things God commands. They have caught the spirit of this age and want, not God's approval, but the approval of the world and the love of the Prince of this world, whom they serve, often knowing exactly who their master really is.

Deceit is everywhere and what I don't see, is any major shocks in the future that are man-made and designed to bring in a world order that is already here. There is no need to. They key now is the ensure that the old order remains with the same players at the head of it (Western banks/corporation) with the US military to back up their economic claims on wherever they deem fit. This is the order that is under threat. The last thing they need is to shock the masses out of their slumber so that they realize that they are not living in a nation that's free, but in a high tech matrix that could very easily and very quickly turn into a prison if push came to shove. Push isn't shoving because it is in no ones interest to do it now.

For Christians my only exhortation is this. Pray. When you get done praying, pray some more. Keep on praying because the longer the devil takes to implement his plans the more of God's people will become discouraged and fall by the wayside, its the 'My Lord delayeth his coming' syndrome (Mat_24:48; Luk_12:45).

Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not. (Luk 12:40)

Given the prophetic timetable that I have laid out and are pretty clear in the books of all the prophets, there is still at least some time before our Lord returns (we must know the times and seasons but will not know the day or hour). The Lord told us (in the parable of the 10 talents Luke 19:12ff) to occupy until he comes, not sit on pins and needles. In occupying he makes it plain that we are to use the 'talents' he has given us. Some have more talents than others but each will be rewarded for their use of them. The person who does not use them? He wound up with nothing, even the talent he though he had was given to someone else. The lesson here is to occupy yourself with whatever God has chosen for you. Are you a preacher? Preach the word, the whole counsel of God, all of it, don't sugar coat the hard sayings, be true to your calling. Are you missionary? Preach the Gospel and lay a firm foundation for new believers so that they don't fall into error by false teachers. Are you a prophet? Then prophesy, but be 100% certain that what you are saying is of the Lord. Don't issue prophecies out of your own heart and say they are of the Lord. That is a very, very dangerous thing to do and if you want to know why a lot of Christian sites that dealt with prophecy are dormant, no longer updated or the prophet is dead? In many cases, that is why.

I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart; Which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbour, as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal. The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the LORD. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the LORD; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that steal my words every one from his neighbour. Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that use their tongues, and say, He saith. Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people *at all, saith the LORD.

(Jer 23:25-32)*

I speak this word to no one in particular and ALL Christian ministries in general (yes, even and especially to myself). Be careful about speaking a prophecy in God's name or dreaming a dream in God's name. Take heed to yourselves lest the Lord carry you off before your time in hot rebuke. Today, before anyone speaks in God's name get before God and know that you are really speaking for him. If you have to do a 'Gideon' (Judges 6:35ff) before you speak it, then do it. Don't become a false prophet because you deceived your own self. Gideon wasn't going to go any further in God's name until he knew for sure the Lord was with him and while Gideon is often chided for having a lack of faith, I am not so sure that is what it was. I think he wanted to be sure that God was using him and not his own imagination and then suffer a major defeat and have God and Israel mad at him for being presumptuous. Keep in mind that Gideon had already seen an angel and seen other miracles before this event referenced above.

From all these things, the fact that he had seen and heard the angel of Jehovah, and that he had been taught by fire out of the rock, by the disappearance of the angel, by the vision of the night, and by the words addressed to him there, Gideon did indeed believe that God both could and would deliver Israel through his instrumentality; but this faith was not placed above or away from the conflict of the flesh by which it was tested. And it is not strange that it rose to its greatest height when the work of deliverance was about to be performed. Wherefore Gideon with his faith sought for a sign from God against the more vehement struggle of the flesh, in order that his faith might be the more confirmed, and might resist the opposing flesh with the great force. And this petition for a sign was combined with prayers for the strengthening of his faith." - (Seb. Schmidt from the K&D commentary on the relevant verses.)

It is true that God does not give many signs to a wicked and perverse generation (Matt 12:39). But to his people, who come to him in all humility and all the faith they can muster? He will often grant a sign. My word to each and every person who comes by this site who may have a ministry of some kind or believe that God is calling you into one; my exhortation is to be true to the word of God, never ever deviate from it. Don't add to it, don't take away from it. Don't add burdens on people that are not in the Bible but don't endorse sin and clear error either. Get before God before you speak in his name. Really get before him and don't go off half-cocked thinking just because you think you are a prophet or a watchman that everything you say is OK to be prefaced with 'thus saith the Lord'. Be steered by God and when God isn't speaking, your best bet is to keep your mouth shut as far as issuing prophecies and words from the Lord. There may be months, even years before you get words and then suddenly you are overwhelmed with them. Rest in what God gives you.

In closing, let me say this. No one in their right mind would seek the job of a prophet. Now I am not saying that prophets are crazy, but I am saying that they are often very unusual people and are given some very strange and extremely difficult tasks and things to perform. One was told to strip naked, another told to marry a hooker, another was thrown into a pit and left for dead. Folks this is not a job for an ordinary person but one specifically called to it and often in a very, very miraculous way. Almost always they feel themselves totally unworthy of it or even run from the job (like Jonah). They often suffer great personal loss because of their ministry (Ezekiel) or are murdered because of it (Zechariah). They are often rejected by their friends and family (John 4:44), though others may honor them. It's kind of like saying, 'I want to be an inmate at Guantanamo when I grow up'. You are asking for serious trials and tribulations, great loneliness and rejection. Do you really want that? Some one who wants that ministry or say they do often just don't know what they are asking.

*But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.
(Mat 20:22)*

Hear me dear brethren. Before you listen to any prophet get before God and check his doctrine against scripture, then find out exactly what the purpose of his word is. Is it to instill fear? It is to instill faith? Is it an exhortation to Godly activity? Step back and ask yourself what is the prophet telling me here. Is he telling me to run for the hills or pray; buy a gun or preach the word? Often that is the best clue to whom is speaking for God and who is not. What is his or her (yes, there are women prophets, though I believe true ones are few in number) overall message and beware... one correct word does not a prophet make. Sometimes they may start off good and end up a shipwreck. I can tell you of a guy whose prophecies were right on the money... years and years before things happened he gave words that were so accurate they are really scary. Now he sells astrological forecasts...

So be cautious in these times with prophets and those with words from the Lord. We are never to despise prophecy but that does not mean we accept them all either. Are you unsure? Get in your prayer closet and God will reveal to you what you need to know.

Grace and peace to all who come by this site and have blessed it with your words of encouragement, editing assistance and financial blessing.

Fear not brethren, God is with you!
